

ABO Wind (AB9 GY) | Utilities/Renewables

December 06, 2021

Confirmation of outlook

Despite delivery delays and price increases at suppliers, ABO Wind remains confident of meeting its profit forecast for the current year. The annual result for 2021 is expected to be slightly above that of 2020 (13.1 million euros). The partly significant price jumps burden the profit margins of individual projects for which ABO Wind had secured electricity tariffs in tenders in previous years. For 2022, the company again expects a slight improvement in earnings according to the current planning status. This includes effects from price increases for solar modules and wind turbines as well as extended delivery times. In the long term, higher input costs are expected to be offset by the results of future tariff tenders and agreements on PPAs. ABO Wind also adheres to the 2024 outlook of increasing annual surpluses to a level of at least 20 million euros on average.

- The company also reiterates the enormous growth potential of the developer business in the coming years against the backdrop of Net Zero plans in many countries worldwide and the resulting demand for wind power, solar and storage technology.
- Valuation: For the valuation of the company, we look at pipeline multiples. For example, the renewable energy subsidiary of Portuguese utility EDP recently paid EUR150 million/GW for a UK pipeline, which was the third major transaction at that price in the last 18 months. For Abo Wind's 10.4 GW pipeline in Europe alone, this represents a value of around EUR 1.6 bn. This valuation approach makes sense in our view, as a pipeline can theoretically be sold at any time, even in parts, in a relatively straightforward manner in the form of project rights.
